Water Resource Manager

Tracked collection

Khejri trees for wells linked by lead to fields. This system should provide enough water for up to 1000 trees that while retaining enough for those downstream, according to tradition and contracts. Artificial lakes are also created to store water for cattle and use during water shortages. Khejri trees are constructed manually by a small group of skilled workers.

With proper maintenance, Khejri trees enable sufficient agriculture based on palm and olive trees, as well as the cultivation of wheat, barley, maize, alfalfa, fruits and vegetables in end gardens. Khejri irrigation systems are an important part of the traditional water management system in the region.
